

Danny McCaw

Danny McCaw, the youngest son of renowned American Expressionist Dan McCaw and brother to modern abstract artist John McCaw, was immersed in the world of art from an early age. Surrounded by painters, poets, and photographers, his creative upbringing fostered a deep connection to artistic expression.

Encouraged from childhood, Danny's early drawings and paintings quickly evolved into mature, thoughtful works. His development as an artist has been shaped not only by his father's mentorship but also through studies at the Scottsdale Art School and with acclaimed figure painter Steve Huston.

Central to Danny's practice is the pursuit of individuality and creative honesty. His work reflects a constant exploration of personal expression, marked by sensitivity, curiosity, and a commitment to creating lasting visual impressions.
